

Georgia Integrative Medicine helping cancer patients through integrated oncology

DR. JOHN KIM is pleased to announce its Program in Integrative Oncology, located at 1267 Hwy. 54, Ste. 4200 (sharing space with Peachtree Hematology & Oncology Consultants) adjacent to Piedmont Fayette Hospital.

Founder of Georgia Integrative Medicine Dr. John Kim first became interested in integrative approaches to treating cancer patients when his mother was diagnosed with breast cancer. While battling cancer with the help of an oncologist, Dr. Kim's mother also benefited from Eastern wellness therapies such as acupuncture and Chinese herbs.

Dr. Kim completed a two-year residential fellowship with Dr. Andrew Weil at the University of Arizona. During his time with Dr. Weil, Dr. Kim worked extensively with cancer patients and discovered the benefits of integrative medicine for supporting patients undergoing treatments for cancer. He found that Eastern-based therapies helped minimize side effects from cancer treatments, ultimately making patients feel better.

Georgia Integrative Medicine's Integrative Oncology Program offers cancer patients tools to improve their quality of life. "If people feel bad," Dr. Kim explains, "then they don't want to live. If your spirit is broken, it is hard to recover. I've found that if you can increase someone's quality of life, they tend to live longer."

Modalities used in the Integrative Oncology Program include acupuncture, traditional Chinese medicine, naturopathy, homeopathy, mind/body medicine, bodywork, prayer and nutrition. It is important to reduce both inflammation and stress during cancer treatment, and Integrative Oncology has the tools to help naturally and gently. In addition, Integrative Oncology helps with fatigue, nausea, immune system support and neuropathy.
